FIGHTING STILL RAGES

Russia Claims Victories—German
Official Reports Credit Kaiser
Soldiers With Holding More Than Their Own On All Sides.

Two months ago today the British army began its retreat from the Marne. Today the battered forces of John French are fifty miles northwest of Mons. In the intervening period the impetuous German advance penetrated almost to the gate of Paris, only to be hurled back against the crucial battle of the Marne, and now the hostile forces are deadlocked on a line which extends from Switzerland to the North sea.

Today's reports throw little light on the course of the battle now raging most intensely on the Franco-Belgian frontier. Upon the fighting on the plains of Flanders in the opinion alike of German, French and British observers depends in large measure on the outcome of the whole campaign and perhaps of the future German operations in France. The official French statement indicates with what intensity the opposing forces are contesting the issue.

It is admitted that the Germans have advanced to the north of Dixmude and in the neighborhood of La Basse, but as a counter stroke it is said the French have pushed forward of Nieuport in the region of Langemark and between Armentieres and Lille. These, the language of the French war office, are "inevitable fluctuations of a contest waged so fiercely."

The war office contented itself with the general statement that the line of combat as a whole had been maintained. Over the remainder of the long battle front, the deadlock continued. Slight progress is claimed by the French in various points in the Woëvre district, but the general position of the opposing forces is changed in no important particulars.

Regarding the situation in the east there is as heretofore a conflict of claims. The French war office asserts that the Germans are now falling back to the south of Warsaw as well as to the west of Ivangorod. Advice from Russia and Austrian sources agree that one of the bitterest battles of the war is in progress along the river San. An official Austrian statement reports the repulse of Russians who had been permitted to cross the river and were then attacked. Dispatches from Petrograd, however, state that the Austrian assault was repulsed by vigorous counter attack of the Russians.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Oct. 24.—German reinforcements of 600,000 men are said to have been rushed to the German right wing and it seems no exaggeration to say that these operations spell the supreme effort of the invaders to break through the allies line. Being denied the use of warships which had been rendering good service for the allies, Germany is said to be throwing her aircraft, and particularly Zeppelins more and more in the fray, and news dispatches relate that the operations of Zeppelins have been a marked feature to the southwest of Ostend, toward which seaport the troops of France, England and Belgium are said to be working their way.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] That the Russians, generally speaking, continue to hold the upper hand in the eastern arena of the war, is the gift of most of the dispatches reaching London, and according to the official German statement the putting of Germany on the defensive in this territory, will prevent her from transporting any force to the western arena.

The French forts at Verdun which have been more or less lost sight of during the days of the line of battle have been making its way slowly across northern France and Belgium and to the front again today as a result of news from German sources to the effect that the Germans' forces are drawing closer to the positions and that the French sorties are failing.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London newspapers are treating as significant the withdrawal of German troops from Antwerp and Brussels, but these movements would appear to be only part of Germany's plan of re-organizing her fighting line.

The Graz net for Germans and Austrians in the British Isles is still spread out, but there has been a temporary lull in these efforts, due to the lack of adequate pretension camps.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Amsterdam, via London, Oct. 24.—A dispatch from Vienna brings the following announcement by the Austrian government under the date of Oct. 23: "Strook Serbian and Montenegrin troops which had penetrated the southern frontier district in east Bosnia that were without offensive works, were defeated Oct. 22, after a severe battle lasting three days in the region of Njokro and were forced to retreat hastily. Details will follow later as the results of the pursuit are not yet known."

The reports of the battle were signed by Ordinance Master Potiorek.

To Stop Looting. The Hague, Oct. 24.—Major General Von Bodenhausen, military commander of Antwerp, has issued a proclamation.

tion countersigned by Burgomaster Devo of Antwerp warning the German troops that they are not admitted to commandeer anything whatsoever, and that privilege is only allowed to officers in accordance with the necessities of military occupation. Antwerp, the proclamation says, was surrendered only on the understanding that the troops would not misuse their power.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Paris, Oct. 24.—Semi-official comment on the present situation made this afternoon by military authorities of Paris, is as follows: "It is proper again to call to public attention that faith should be placed in the official bulletins of the German general staff. A bulletin given out by this staff alleges that our attacks on the heights of Thiaucourt were repulsed with very considerable losses to our men."

Tells of Advances. "As a matter of fact, our offensive in this direction found it impossible to maintain by itself at all the points won in the course of this advance movement; nevertheless we were successful in retaining as a whole the greater part of the Tournai, which our offensive movement succeeded in taking."

"This morning a German officer was sent under a flag of truce to the commander of the French army operating in this region. He requested permission for the German authorities an armistice to bury the dead and remove the wounded. The French commander sent the officer back to his line and immediately ordered an attack on the enemy to be renewed."

The arrival of a French force at Brabant-Sur-Meuse, near Conservey, at the heights of Mont Faucon, where the crown prince is entrenched, a new element added to the chain of the allies' strength in this district.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] The French aviators continue to give proof of courage at the same time adding considerably to the list of German dead. One bomb through the assembly of cavalry killed thirty of the enemy. German planes all the bombs caused eight deaths, and injured twenty-two other persons. Similar incidents are almost a daily occurrence and in one instance the staff of German officers in the vicinity of the German division was annoyed by aerial flights of the enemy that it was compelled to change its headquarters.

Tells of Battles. The official communication given out at the war office this afternoon says that the Germans have made progress to the north of Dixmude and in the vicinity of La Basse, and that the French have made material advances to the east of Nieuport and in the region of Langemark and between Armentieres and Lille. The text of the communication was as follows:

The battle continues on our left wing. The enemy has made progress to the north of Dixmude and in the vicinity of La Basse. We have made considerable advances to the east of Nieuport in the region of Langemark and the region between Armentieres and Lille. It is a question of inevitable fluctuations in the line of combat which, however, maintains itself as a whole.

Germans Repulsed. On the rest of the front several German attacks by day and by night have been repulsed. At various places we have made slight progress. In the Woëvre district, our advance has continued in the direction of the forest of Montmorency, south of Thiaucourt, and in the forest of Le Petre, north of Pont-A-Mousson.

Russian Report. "Russia," the Germans are retreating to the south of Warsaw as well as to the west of Ivangorod and Nova, Alexandria. Desperate fighting continues in Galicia on the Sandzha front. At Przemyśl the Russians have taken 2,000 Austrian prisoners.

Official Report. Washington, Oct. 24.—The following official dispatch was received today at the French embassy: "In the Soutere and the region of Verdun and Pont-A-Mousson we have made certain particular successes."

"In order to appreciate the results accomplished by the allies it is necessary to consider the conditions as reported at the end of last month, when the left wing of our line was on the Oise in the region of Compiègne, and when those portions which were disposed further to the west hardly reached the Somme in the vicinity of Amiens."

Today, however, the battle front stretches 200 kilometers through Belgium, reaching the ocean, where our left wing, co-operates with the English fleet.

West Flanders Battle. Paris, Oct. 24.—Attention remains fixed today on the terrific struggles on the plains of Flanders, and other points of the long battle line in France second of second consideration. Frenchmen, as usual, studied the war office statement with the greatest care and although they are impatient for a conclusion apparently they are as confident as ever of the ultimate success of the north attack in other section served to strengthen the positions of the opposite side. The arrival of a French force at Brabant-Sur-Meuse, near Conservey, at the heights of Mont Faucon, where the crown prince is entrenched is a new element added to the chain of the allies' strength in this district.

No Let-Up to Battle. London, Oct. 24.—What a German military expert has called a life and death struggle for Germany is still raging along the coast end of the western battle front. Every indication is that the invaders are hurrying their strength against the allies in an effort to capture Dunkirk and Calais.

Strong reports from various captured cities in Belgium state of the evacuation of the preparations for departure of the German forces holding them, but these movements may merely mean that every available man is being thrown forward to the French-Belgian frontier. Antwerp is said to have been practically deserted by the Germans. Witnesses of German officers in Brussels are said to have received orders to leave within forty-eight hours.

Paris reports that the action of the allies' left wing, continuing with great violence, especially around Arras, La Basse and Armentieres. Here the usual see-saw occurs, neither side gaining permanent advantage of the other.

Allies Approach Ostend. A special dispatch states that the allies' left wing, continuing with great violence, especially around Arras, La Basse and Armentieres. Here the usual see-saw occurs, neither side gaining permanent advantage of the other.

Retograd reports a continuation of the pursuit of the Germans retreating from Warsaw, and admits an unexpected stubborn resistance to the Russian offensive from the Austrians on the San, while the official Vienna report says that a dash was made before Przemyśl and a dashing movement toward the Vistula, admits that the Russians were permitted to cross the San in several places.

Hope Emden Is Sunk. England is hoping today that the career of the famous German commerce destroyer Emden is ended. This hope is based on a couple of more or less cryptic cables from Bombay, one issued by the Bombay government department, clearing that all reports may be considered reasonably safe from nine o'clock in the evening of October 21, and the other one unconfirmed report from Bombay to the Morning Post dated the 22nd that the Emden had been accounted for.

The problem of feeding the starving people of Belgium is daily growing more acute and the American commission finds itself hampered from the pursuit of the Germans retreating from Warsaw, and admits an unexpected stubborn resistance to the Russian offensive from the Austrians on the San, while the official Vienna report says that a dash was made before Przemyśl and a dashing movement toward the Vistula, admits that the Russians were permitted to cross the San in several places.

The order issued by England preventing the importation of sugar is significant of the attitude of the government toward the movement of any commodity that might assist its enemies.

NO MORE BRITISH ABOUT SANDY HOOK

John Bull Withdraws War Craft From
New York Water Entrance on Demand of Federal Government.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Oct. 24.—There will be no further interference by British cruisers with American commerce at the gates of New York. At the beginning of the war several British cruisers made their appearance off Sandy Hook. Explains of neutral ships were signalled and in some cases stopped by the British cruisers to establish their identity, the destination of their ships and the nature of the cargo. The British government was called to the practice at the suggestion of the navy department, and orders have been given for its prompt discontinuance.

HOSPITAL SHIP IS REPORTED AGROUND

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Oct. 24.—The French ship Marseillaise with wounded soldiers on board is ashore near Cape Barfleur, sixteen miles east of Cherbourg, according to a telegram received here from the Lloyd signal station at Cowes, in the English Channel. The ship was seen at Niton, Isle of Wight, by a French ship standing by.

WISCONSIN IN NEED OF WHITE SLAVE ACT

So Says Senator Howard Teasdale of Sparta, Who Is Now Preparing His Vice Report.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—"What we need in this state is a law similar to the Mann white slave act, which shall be applicable not only to the counties, but to towns and maybe wards of a city."

This was the statement of Senator Howard Teasdale of Sparta, who for two weeks has been here going over the evidence offered the white slave investigating committee in this state. "Such a law will put the cursed road houses and all the kind of debauchery out of business," continued Senator Teasdale. "It is in these holes, following the dance and wine room, that women are ruined, that the committee will recommend such a law in the report to the legislature. I am for it and I understand the other members are for such legislation also."

I don't believe that making the offense a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine, is the best way to handle it. The sentence should be one to state's prison. In all of the cases before the committee, the women are being disgraced? It is always the women. I believe that such offenses against the moral law should punish the men by sure disgrace as well."

Senator Teasdale said that the committee had four stenographers busy copying the report. From present indications he said that the report would contain about 200 pages of printed matter and he hoped to have it ready for publication by Nov. 15. He declared that the law allowed the printing of 10,000 copies of the report with copies of the suggested legislation to cure the evils discovered and that this information would be sent to every member elected to the next legislature shortly after election.

Some of the testimony given before the committee was "reforming legislation is necessary."

ELEVEN ARE SAVED FROM WATERY GRAVE

Workmen Rescued on Lake Shore at Milwaukee as Waves Rise High.
—Were Installing Intake
Crib.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Milwaukee, Oct. 24.—Eleven workmen employed on a new waterworks intake crib nearly a mile from shore of Lake Michigan, were today rescued from watery graves by the life saving crew of the coast guard cutter. The high waves which dashed over the crib made it impossible for a tug to approach near enough to take the men off.

A. G. Hehlenker, a member of the life saving crew, swam to the crib from a motor boat with a life and life belt, and one by one the men were rescued, after a thrilling experience.

The rescue today calls to mind the waterworks disaster of April 30, 1893, when twenty-one men lost their lives on a waterworks crib during a storm.

KABAT SEARCHED FOR BY APPLETON POLICE

Sheriff Verhagen, Chief Garvey and Two Deputy Sheriffs Probe for

YELLOW PERIL IS NOT DANGEROUS WEAPON IN U. S.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Oct. 24.—Fear of the yellow peril in the United States is absolutely unfounded and no country of Europe or America need feel that it is in danger of being rivalled in the far east in the immediate future. This was the opinion of Prof. Daniel W. Mead of the University of Wisconsin, one of the three noted American engineers who have been studying means of preventing famine-producing flood conditions in China.

Mead is home and says that the Chinese come and the Americans their best friends. On the other hand, he found not so friendly a feeling on the part of the Japanese. He said that the Japanese discriminating against Japanese in holding land in that state.

BUSINESS MEN TO ACT AS SPECIAL TEACHERS.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Oct. 24.—Business men from various concerns will give business tips to Chicago school children this winter under a program announced today by John B. Shoop, assistant superintendent of public schools.

The idea is to stimulate boys and girls to a desire for business and to give them a practical knowledge of business. "From short talks by business men they will get a touch of character not obtainable from blackboards and school books. There is much to be gained by bringing the pupils into contact with business men."

The Association of Commerce will cooperate with school authorities in making the "business lectures" a success.

CLAIMS DESTROYER SUNK JAP CRUISER

Navy Department at Tokio Believes that German Torpedo Boat Destroyer S-90 Did the Damage.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Tokio, Oct. 24.—It is officially announced that the navy department now believes that the Japanese cruiser Takachio, which was sunk in Kiao Chow harbor on Oct. 17, was torpedoed by the German torpedo boat destroyer S-90.

Unofficial accounts say that the S-90, masked by heavy seas, dashed out of the bay and launched her deadly torpedo. She then ran the blockade and was pursued by the enemy's destroyers. Following what her fate would be, her commander drove her on the shore and fired the magazines. The captain of the crew of sixty escaped in the direction of Shanghai, and were in charge and interned by Chinese soldiers.

Vice Admiral Sadachichi Kato, commander of the second Japanese squadron before Takachio, reports that the conditions of the wreckage of the Takachio indicate the fact that the explosion was visible for a distance of twenty miles, and the stories of the survivors convince him that the Japanese vessel was torpedoed by the German destroyer.

According to the survivors, many members of the crew of the Japanese vessel were blown overboard. These men, united in singing the chorus of the Japanese anthem, and thus notified. The commander of the Takachio died at his post on the bridge.

Washington Bank of $20,000 a Week Ago.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Bellingham, Wash., Oct. 24.—Two more of the five bandits who robbed the First National Bank of Seco-Woolley of $20,000 last Saturday night, killing a watchman and wounding a citizen, were shot and killed by officers early today.

Both of today's victims of the officers' rifles carried heavy money bags. One had $1,544 and the other $1,643. More than $5,000 of the stolen money was recovered from the bandits who fell in Thursday's fight.

tured Soldiers to Italy if

WORK BEING RUSHED ON PERRY MEMORIAL.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Put-in-Bay, Ohio, Oct. 24.—In an effort to complete the huge Perry Memorial monument at Put-in-Bay, in the few remaining weeks before the close of lake navigations, workmen are rushing the work on the stone shaft, which will commemorate the victory on Lake Erie of Commodore Perry over the British naval expedition. Roy H. Robinson, the contracting engineer who is directing the work, now hopes to have the tower entirely finished by December 1.

The few privileged persons who have been permitted to go to the top of the monument, which towers 355 feet above the lake level and 327 feet above the ground at its base, pronounce the construction of the shaft a marvel in engineering. With a diameter of 45 feet in diameter, so light is the angle from base to top, however, that the monument is said to be the most perpendicular of any equal height in the world.

Just 17 feet from the extreme top of the huge pile has been built a balcony with an overhang of 16 feet. This balcony is constructed of great granite stones, each several tons in weight. Forty-seven flights of stairs, winding round and round the inside of the shaft, lead to the balcony.

Elevators will be installed later. Chief among the tasks still remaining is the placing of the bronze statue, which will be a bronze work, in itself, will be an engineering feat that few could accomplish. The weight of the bronze can is forty tons. It is declared that, already, contractor Robinson has sustained a financial loss $80,000 in the construction of the monument.

CARMAN MURDER CASE RESTED BEFORE NOON

COUNSEL EXPECTED TO HAND
POINTS TO JURY LATE THIS AFTERNOON—DEFENDANT SMILES.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Alnbrook, N. Y., Oct. 24.—The defense of Mrs. Florence Condit Carman, on trial for murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, rested shortly before noon today.

LOEWE IN TESTIMONY

States He Saw Man Run From House,
After Shot Was Fired—Freeport
Policeman Tells Story.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Alnbrook, N. Y., Oct. 24.—The defense of Mrs. Florence Condit Carman, on trial for murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, rested shortly before noon today.

Counsel prepared to sum up and indicate that the case would reach the jury late this afternoon.

Mrs. Carman smiled as she entered the courtroom. She bowed to friends, greeted her husband with a nod and smile, and taking a seat at the counsel table chatted with him and her lawyers until proceedings began.

MRS. FLORENCE CARMAN

Rudolph Loewe, first witness called today, testified that he was on his way to Dr. Carman's office and within fifteen feet of the window when the shot which killed Mrs. Bailey was fired. Loewe heard the shot, looked up and saw a man run across the lawn and leap over the fence.

Mr. Loewe was very deaf and spoke English with a pronounced accent. George M. Levy, Mrs. Carman's lawyer, went close to the witness stand and shouted questions into Mr. Loewe's ear. Loewe said after he had heard the shot and seen the man jump over the fence, he looked into Dr. Carman's office and saw the doctor with a woman in his arms.

There were two women in front of the house when the shot was fired. Loewe said he did not know standing in the vestibule to the doctor's office.

"How near were you to the two women you saw on the steps?" Mr. Smith asked.

"About fifteen feet," Loewe replied. He said that the man he saw was "my height and not so thick." Justice Kelly left his seat on the bench and stood beside the witness chair to shout his questions. Loewe was quite positive that notwithstanding his infirmity he had heard the shot.

Justice Kelly asked him how long he had looked into the doctor's office, and said about 30 seconds. Then he left he said, but before doing so a door opened and a woman in white entered the office. Justice Kelly said that woman who had been shot was lying on the floor.

John J. Dunbar, a Freeport policeman, testified that after the murder he brought bloodhounds to the Carman house. He said he found the broken picket in the fence mentioned in the testimony yesterday. The picket was opposite the broken window. On the premises next door he had found near the fence, a place where a man's feet had been, apparently the man had been standing there for some time.

After bringing the bloodhounds to the house, Dunbar said he took the two dogs with him and they went from there to the broken picket. Then the dogs were allowed to smell the window sill. They growled, went around the house came up to the place where the fence was broken, left the premises and went as far as Lynbrook, three miles away and stopped, having lost the trail.

On cross examination Dunbar said he had taken the screen off the window the night of the murder, propped it up with a piece of new shingle, which he had found near a small out house, being built in the rear of the Carman residence. The dogs, after smelling the window sill, went to this house, he said.

District Attorney Smith announced at the noon recess that he had on the witness to testify this afternoon. The plan agreed upon among the counsel that the defense would be given two hours, from 2 to 4 o'clock, to sum up, that a short recess probably be taken then and that on its conclusion the district attorney would address the jury for two hours; that the judge would then deliver his charge and the jury retire to deliberate.

Under this plan it was expected the case would be in the jury's hands by eight o'clock.

After M. J. Haughey, trainer of bloodhounds, had corroborated Dunbar's story.

GET BUSY!

When men sit around and twiddle their thumbs and tell each other business is "going to be bad," their predictions are apt to come true—for them.

Times are as good as we make them and no better.

The "live wires" are not complaining. They are hustling.

They are not waiting for opportunities. They are making them.

Turn to the advertising columns of the live daily newspapers and you see the men who are going after business now.

They are getting it, too.

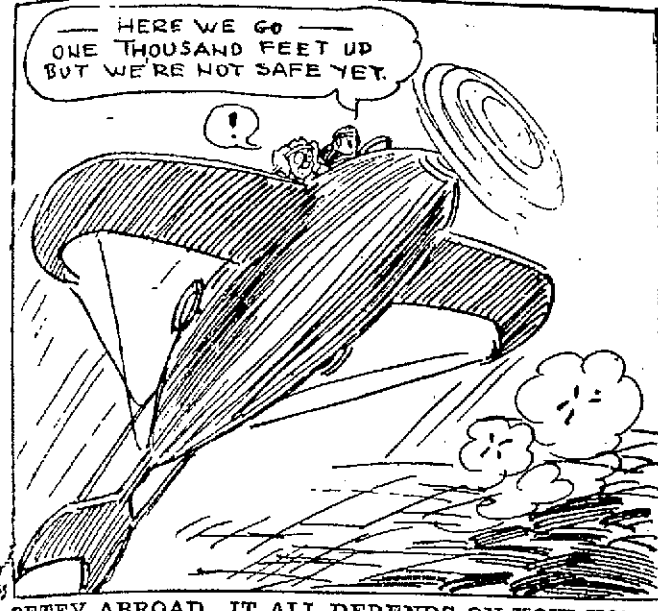

This photo was taken not far from Antwerp, during a Belgian retreat. Though in great haste to escape from the enemy, the two uninjured Belgian soldiers seen in the photograph are determined not to leave their wounded comrade behind.

STAGE IS SET FOR NORTH END COMBAT

Big Crowd Expected to Witness Game Between Beloit North Ends and Cardinals Here Sunday.

Fair weather is promised for the Cardinal-North End game Sunday when Janesville and Beloit get into action on the Association park diamond to settle the inter-city dispute as to who has the best ball team. After an affair of this kind is scheduled there is always keen rivalry between the home rooters and Sunday's game will not prove an exception to this rule.

After a two weeks' layoff the Cardinals will engage in the deciding game of the season in this section. The fact that they have had no practice since the Albany combat, which they dropped 2 to 1 in a slab duel, the second game last Sunday was postponed because of the threatening weather until tomorrow, and it is hoped that the two sides will be able to stage their little warfare and end the baseball season in this section. A strong line-up is announced for the Cardinals to meet the North Ends, but the "official" team has not been made public. Crandall is billed to do the heavy lifting and fans here hope that the teacher-pitcher will be able to quell the haughty Beloiters. Several new players, including Hyland, will probably be in the Janesville team to meet the league aggregation of Beloit.

Janesville winning the game Sunday, tying the series, the deciding game will be played at Yost's park a week later and local fans are already planning for the third and last game. The biggest crowd of the year is expected for this game, as several hundred Beloit fans will be present calling for a victory, which would end the series and allow the North Ends to take the title back home with them. Whooten, who tamed the Cardinals three weeks ago, is said to be the pitching choice of Eddie Lenahan, with Eddie Garrity as his battery mate.

CHICAGO CUBS TO TRAIN AT JANSVILLE PLANT

An individual signing as K. P., which might stand for most anything, entered the hall of fame for yesterday.

the same K. P. made the Chicago Tribune Line-o-Type with the following wheeze: "What's the best place to have the Cubs train in next spring? K. P. suggests that they go to work in the Janesville batting mills."

MAROONS WILL HAVE TOUGH JOB DEFEATING PURDUE.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) Chicago, Ill., Oct. 24.—Chicago faced her toughest job thus far this year when Coach Andy Smith's Purdue eleven trotted out upon Stagg field this afternoon, charged by a big rooting contingent from the Indiana school.

The Boiler-makers offered a team of seasoned players much speedier than the 1913 eleven, who scored on Wisconsin last week and were only defeated by the Badgers by the score of 14 to 1. This afternoon's game afforded a comparison between the Badgers and the Maroons who will meet next Saturday in the game that may determine the 1914 conference championship. Incidentally, the Badger scouts were here in force to get a line on Stagg's plays.

Purdue rooters believed that the Indiana eleven might win in the "breaks," went their way. Though Coach Stagg was far from optimistic, the feeling in the Chicago stands when the opening whistle sounded favored Chicago to win by about one touchdown.

HOLD VETERANS OUT IN GAME WITH NORTHWESTERN

Evansville, Ill., Oct. 24.—Few of Illinois' first string men went into action against Northwestern on Patton field this afternoon. Confident that his reserves could hold their own against the weak Purple eleven, Coach Zupke took no chances of injuring his stars in advance of the important Minnesota game next Saturday.

While the Illinois ran through signal drill, it was reported that Ruen, reserve back, would be at fullback in place of Scholinger and the Pogue, the Illinois star backfield man, would be substituted by Wagner.

DOING GOOD WORK FOR OLD NASSAU

Driggs.

Driggs, Princeton left halfback, is doing some good toe work these days and it is expected that he will be a big factor in the annual Yale-Princeton game at Princeton, November 14.

MICHIGAN'S LINE PROVES STRONG; YOST TO HAVE MEN AT TOP SPEED BY OCT. 31

With Michigan's string of victories unbroken, the idea is gradually beginning to prevail that the line cannot be as weak as was thought early in the season. Thus Yost has a strong all-around team, which will be going at top speed when the Wolverines meet Harvard, October 31. Two Michigan stars who are expected to do their share toward humbling the crimson are Galt and Maulbetsch.

be substituted by Wagner. Yesterday's "line-o-type" football was to be used by the Illinois, who were leaving no stone unturned in their plans might be solved by scouts from other contenders for the Big Nine championship. About 1,000 rooters accompanied the team here from Champaign.

Sport Snap Shots

Down in New York they are calling Harry Stevens, the gentle, manly and urbane Delmonico of the Polo grounds, "Supreme King" Stevens, and this is why:

Harry employs about 400 waiters and vendors to serve the crowds during the games, and he is a stickler on promptitude. One day one of his skilled lieutenants, who wields the razor and shaves him for the sandwiches, reported late and Harry caught him.

"Why are you late?" demanded Harry.

"I saw, Mr. Stevens, sah. I was initiated into the lodge last night and Ah was up so late Ah overslept."

"No excuse," snorted Harry. "Initiation doesn't last all night."

"But, sah, after Ah was initiated Ah was inducted into office."

"Inducted into office the first night?" demanded Harry. "What office?"

"Ah was inducted into the office of supreme king."

"Supreme king—the first night you join the lodge?" exclaimed Harry.

"Yes, sah. Po see, dat am de lowest office we hab."

Now that the Braves are world's champions, it is quite likely that many of the big league managers will adopt the Stallings method of varying the attack according to what sort of a pitcher is working for the opposition. Stallings have five regular outfielders: Cather, Whitted, Connolly, Moran and Mann. And yet, only one out of the five can be counted as a regular. That's Whitted. He's the regular center fielder and holds down the job no matter whether the opposition play a left handed or a right handed pitcher. If the other side uses a right handed twirler Stallings uses Moran, Connolly and Whitted. If a southpaw goes against the Braves, Stallings makes an immediate shift, replacing Connolly and Moran with Mann and Cather, who bat from the other side of the plate.

Left handed batting averages and other new kinks in the vital statistics of the national pastime will be inaugurated by the Federal league in its official review of the current season's work. Secretary Lloyd Rickard of Gilmore's organization already is working on plans for more complete records than are furnished by the American and National leagues. By left handed batting averages Rickard does not mean that the great statistics will be compiled with the left hand of the statistician. His idea is to separate the right and left handed batters in his league and compile a special list of averages for each division. Those few batters who count 'em from both sides of the plate will be ranked in both lists.

Uncle Tom McCarey, dean of Pacific coast boxing promoters, is pulling some foxy stuff these days. McCarey is running no shows, and with good reason. California will vote on boxing November 3, and it's possible the game will be legislated out of existence. McCarey figures that if he runs no shows between now and election day he cannot do anything to influence any more votes toward boxing. Other promoters are not following the Los Angeles man's example. San Francisco men are trying to stage all the matches they can make, so as to close California's ring career with a loud noise if the voters put the kibosh on the sport.

Coach Yost of Michigan University football team is reported to have declared: "Give me eleven good tacklers and blockers and I will defeat the greatest team of kickers and runners in the country. Tackling and blocking are the two fundamental plays of football. A tackler is the essential defensive play and blocking is the important element of a strong defense. Anybody can run with the ball if you have got the other fellows spilled."

James Gaffney, having realized his ambition in the National league, by winning a pennant, and world's championship, may dispose of the Boston Braves and buy into the American league. A story to this effect is now going the rounds. Gaffney is said to be trying to purchase the New York Yankees, owned and controlled by Frank J. Farrell for a number of years past.

ORGANIZE BUREAU FOR GIVING INFORMATION ON PRISONERS OF WAR.

(Correspondence of The A. P.) Paris, Oct. 24.—The Geneva committee organized to centralize and assure the exchange of information regarding prisoners of war is receiving more than two thousand inquiries a day by letter, in addition to many telegrams.

Requests for information have been received from Monsieur Dalcasse, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, concerning his son, wounded near Nancy and picked up by the Germans, from Sir Edward Grey, English Foreign Minister, concerning his nephew, Princess of Saxe-Meininghausen, from the rector of the university of Munich, concerning his son, a prisoner in England.

A German general, unable to do so himself, begged the committee to send good news to the wife of a French colonel, a prisoner at Karlsruhe.

The Paris papers are also serving as a sort of clearing house for information concerning families and friends dispersed as the result of the exodus from the north of France on the approach of the Germans.

Some of the papers are carrying pages of these inquiries, and it has been proposed to organize a committee similar to the Geneva committee to take charge of them.

GERMANS DO NOT CARE FOR CAVALRY HORSES SAYS AMERICAN MAN.

(Correspondence of The A. P.) London, Oct. 24.—However effective the German army may be in other respects, its cavalry men, even the Uhlans, do not know how to take care of horses says E. A. Cartrell of Newport, Kentucky, who has arrived in London after an exciting trip through German lines in Belgium.

Every cavalry horse he observed seemed to suffer from sore back. The returning cavalymen generally led their mounts with saddle loosened. Some of the back were quite raw. This is largely due, he thinks, to the way the Germans have of turning themselves around in their saddles to ease their positions when on the march.

The German artillery and equipment impressed Cartrell as being perfect. There was not a detail lacking. The men all fit their places and seemed in the best of spirits.

Capital Punishment.

A more humane way of administering capital punishment has been discovered. A well-known scientist, who for some years has been professor of chemistry in the College de France, Paris, has suggested the use of carbonic oxide for the production of death for criminals, as employed for the destruction of stray dogs. He states that this is a quiet and painless death, and one that does not shock the sensibilities.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

A NEIGHBOR of mine is very much excited over a novel which she has just finished. It is a book which you have probably read as it is one of the best sellers two years ago. It is a story of the way the big business man cleanses the outside of the platter with his charities and his formal church going while he makes the inside of the cup rotten with his oppression of his employees and his indifference to wrong social conditions.

My neighbor, as I said, has been deeply impressed by this story. "How I wish I were a big business man," she says indignantly. "The inference of her tone is that she would act very differently from the man of the story."

I wonder if she would. The wealthy man in the story would not be the temptation of his power and committed the abuses of his class. He was no worse than the average. That means that only those who have a right to criticize him who do not misuse any power, however small, which they may have over their fellow beings, nor share the abuses of their class.

My neighbor showed me a package which came to her from a shop the other day. She had ordered a dozen handkerchiefs; they sent her two dozen by mistake. She had no thought whatever of returning the extra ones.

My neighbor keeps a maid. She is obliged to let that maid have her evenings off because the other helpers in the neighborhood have that privilege, and if she didn't grant it she couldn't keep her. But she resents the necessity bitterly. Yet the maid works ten hours a day and feels that she should have the rest of the time absolutely to herself.

My neighbor wanted a dress finished for a certain date. In order to make assurance doubly sure, she told the dressmaker that she absolutely must have it because she was going away on the 17th, naming a date a week earlier than the occasion for which she really wanted it. She finished the dress on time by sitting up until two for two nights. Incidentally she did not receive her pay (of which she was in considerable need) for over a month.

This, then, is the woman who thinks that if she were a big business man with all the temptations of power and wealth, all the pressure of competition, she would treat her employees according to the Golden Rule.

A friend of mine, I'm not justifying the selfish and tyrannical employer. That's the last thing in the world I want to do. I only mention a world of ready critics that we have no right to criticize unless we have been square and clean in those relations of life which our humble station imposes upon us.

It is easy to grow indignant over injustice and think what you would do if you had great power.

But what are you doing with the lesser power you do have? As you use that, so, in all probability, would you use the greater.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are girls of nineteen and twenty-one years of age.

(1) Would you please tell me if it would be proper for a lady to go and meet her intended husband at his home?

(2) Is it proper for us girls to associate with girls who are not equal to our standing?

(3) When a girl is engaged is it correct for her to keep company with other boys when her intended is in another state?

(4) Is it correct for engaged girls to go to entertainments with their lovers and against their wishes?

(5) When a girl is going to get married, how long before should her friends give her a miscellaneous shower?

(6) Is it right for a boy who is engaged to accept presents from any girl except his fiancée?

(7) Is it proper for a girl to exchange pictures with a boy that she never met?

(8) After the engagement is announced it is perfectly proper for the young lady to visit the home of her fiancée and meet his people.

(9) My dear lady, I know what you mean. All American girls are equal in a sense. You can associate with any self-respecting girl who carries herself like a lady. There are no caste in America or should not be. A girl is a snob who will cut an associate because she is not as good clothes or as fine a home as she.

(10) That should be as the young people agree. If the young man is to be away for any length of time and the engagement has not been either of them should turn resolute. Of course, she should not have any regular escort, but going with the young people of her set with different escorts would be perfectly proper and he should have the same privilege.

(11) That would depend on whether their wishes were reasonable or not, but if they were not reasonable you would not wish to be engaged to be married to him. I cannot see how any two people who loved each other enough to marry could disagree on any such subject. If the young man could not go to an entertainment and the young lady wished to go with her mother or a suitable chaperone, he would certainly not object if he cared for her happiness. And if there was anything objectionable about the entertainment she surely would not care to go if she was self-respecting.

(12) A friend of the parents usually announce the betrothal at a party and showers follow at once and may continue up to the time of the wedding. Showers are usually within two months of the wedding.

(13) Certainly not.

(14) A girl should not cheapen herself by permissiveness giving of pictures. They are reserved for friends.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl twenty years old. Lately I have had a great desire to enter a hospital and become a nurse. Do you think I would be sorry for doing so? Some of my friends say

WITH THANKS. My dear, the career of a nurse is a very useful one, but it is very hard and it takes a strong constitution and great qualities to make one successful in it. The fact that you desire it greatly probably means that you could succeed in it, but unless you are prepared to endure hard work and not try it, those who are fitted for the work love it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a young man rooming at our home with whom I would like to become better acquainted. He leaves in the morning at 7:45 and gets home in the evening at 7:30 and 9. Please advise me.

ANXIOUSLY WAITING. A good way would be to invite him to meet some of your friends on a special evening, and then make it as pleasant as possible for him.

Household Hints

THE HOME SEAMSTRESS. When making Dust Caps, corset covers or similar articles that require heading for ribbon use the cotton elastic on the edge instead of sewing on beading. It affords an excellent substitute for the latter. Draw the ribbon under the elasticities; it looks neat, wears well and does not show anything. Finish the neck of baby's dresses in the same way.

Quick Way to Mark Linen Sheets. Etc.—Write the line in pencil, then stitch over the line with sewing machine, using a coarse thread and long stitch.

To Keep Silk on a new spool from falling off when first opened, dampen in water. This will not injure the most delicate shade and silk thus treated will run much better when used on sewing machine.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING. To remove white spots from highly polished furniture, take equal parts of oil and pumice stone and mix to a paste. Apply with a soft rag and the white spots disappear.

When cleaning a spot from a garment with gasoline, a ring is often left. To prevent this, use a teaspoonful of salt to a cup of gasoline. Peel onions near hot stove; also Apply Sloan's Freely For Lumbago. Your attacks of Lumbago are not nearly so hopeless as they seem. You can relieve them almost instantly by a simple application of Sloan's Liniment on the back and loins. Lumbago is a form of rheumatism, and yields perfectly to Sloan's, which penetrates quickly also in through the sore, tender muscles, limbers up the back and makes it feel fine. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any drugist and have it in the house—against colds, sore and swollen joints, rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief.

Good Carpet and Rug Cleaner. Take eight ounces ammonia, one-half ounce borax, one-half ounce table salt, one-half teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon alum, one large bar white soap. Dissolve all together, add two gallons soft hot water, store away in jug or crock; must be kept closed. Use: Add three tablespoons of this liquid to two gallons hot soft water; shake well before using. This will brighten any old rug or carpet.

Macaroni Italian Style—Boil one package macaroni in salt water for fifteen minutes, then drain and pour cold water on it. Brown one onion, cut fine, in frying pan, pour over this one can tomatoes and one green pepper cut in small pieces; add pinch of salt, chicken with flour and water and pour over macaroni. Sprinkle one-fourth pound York State cheese on top and bake in modern oven for one-half hour.

Orange Salad—Cut top and bottom layer of peeled seedless oranges and slice each in four thick pieces; arrange on lettuce with an English walnut half on each side, and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Thanksgiving Fruit Cookies—This recipe makes about nine dozen delicious cookies which may be kept indefinitely. Cream one cup butter with one and one-half cups granulated sugar, add three beaten eggs, one teaspoon soda dissolved in one and one-half tablespoons hot water, three and one-quarter cups flour sifted with one-half teaspoon salt (reserve a little flour for dredging fruit), one teaspoon cinnamon, one cup chopped nut meats (English walnut or hickory) half cup currants and half cup raisins cut into bits. Drop by spoonful on buttered sheet about one inch apart.

Lemon Sponge Pie—One grated rind and juice of lemon, one cup sugar, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour. In another dish, yolks of two eggs, one cup milk. Mix slowly with the first. Then add beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in raw pie crust in layer cake pan.

Delicious Cake Frosting—To the beaten white of an egg add a cup of granulated sugar and one sour graded apple. Beat thirty minutes.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA DONARD

"Martha, have you the money for the subscription to the magazine? I received a notification this morning that mine has run out."

The speaker was an old gentleman with dim blue eyes, overhung with bushy gray eyebrows. His thin white hair was combed straight back from a high, narrow forehead, the gold-rimmed glasses were attached to a long black string fastened to a button-hole of his vest. He wore a long, red study gown and black leather slippers.

"I don't know whether there is enough money in the house or not. There has not been much work brought in this week," replied a plain woman in a gray dress and apron.

"There is only $1.10. How much do you need?" she asked.

"It is a dollar and a half a year," he answered. "Haven't you forty cents you can let me have, Amy?"

He turned to his daughter-in-law, who was washing dishes at the sink. "You were washing dishes at the sink, you said. I haven't any change," he coldly answered the young woman.

The old gentleman tiptoed out and very softly closed the door behind him. A habit he had when displeased the old woman went to her room in the corner of the kitchen and the monotonous jar of weaving was heard through the house.

"Mother, why don't you take a stand on money matters?" the dishwasher began with warmth. "Why don't you insist that if he is to have money for all his fads and trills he must do something to earn it? Here you work weaving carpets and rugs, and all the housework and tend the garden besides. Father is as able to work as you are, yet not one thing does he do to help you. You could at least see that he made the garden."

"I have asked him to do it, but he does not like gardening," said the patient old woman.

"I suppose it is good for your back," sarcastically replied the girl. "Mother, you have spoiled him. Such selfishness makes selfishness in its most repulsive form. My mother used to say, if anyone is

A torch-light headed by the Grand Army drum corps will precede the meeting. There will be the teen separate women's organizations in line.

President W. O. Thompson, of the Ohio State university, is among the men speakers who are scheduled to urge votes for women at the mass meeting. Representatives of all political parties have been invited to attend.

Tonight's meeting ends a tour of the state by Mrs. Catt and Mrs. Upton during which many meetings were held in the interest of the women's suffrage constitutional amendment which will go before the voters at the election, November 3.

The boys helped with the garden before they left home. The garden is our mainstay. You know we eat little meat."

"Of course you had it to do when he was sick, but what angers me is his doing nothing now except spend glasses were attached to a long black string fastened to a button-hole of his vest. He wore a long, red study gown and black leather slippers."

"That's it, satisfied him. Look at the hours of weaving it took to pay for printing and postage. All those papers he takes cost a lot of money. It makes me angry every time I come here to see how you work. You have nothing, you go nowhere, there is not a bit of pleasure in your life. Tell him you can't keep him supplied with money."

"Amy, you don't know what you are asking. I could not live at all if I held out a month about signing that mortgage on the home to raise money for the mining stocks and finally gave in. He would not let me sleep nights. He talked all night long about the advantages of buying that stock. Finally I signed. I was dead for sleep."

"What about him, could he live without sleep?" asked Amy.

"Oh, he slept in the day time. I had my work to do."

"The brute!" exclaimed the girl. "Why did you not lock yourself in another room? Now the boys must pay the mortgage; the mine has closed down."

"I am sorry about that," said the weary old woman. "It is the price of peace. I cannot live in a wrangle. Sometimes peace is not worth its price. Besides, I should not call that peace," replied Amy. "I think the boys ought to take the matter in hand; give him some money for his hobbies, which would be instantly stopped the moment he asked you for a cent of money. They could make it conditional on his taking care of the garden. I shall speak to John about it," and she kissed the patient old face at the loom.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

At this time of the year one of the trials of the housewife is the roughness and poor condition of her hands.

In general, as the result of doing the work that the fall months call for. Both inside and outside have numberless little tasks for the housekeeper.

Tasks that she must see to herself. This wishing to have one's hands in good condition may seem to some a matter of vanity, but outside of the disagreeable feeling of roughened, chapped hands, such a condition is not compatible with the doing of fine sewing and the many other dainty pieces of work that come under the many-sided duties of home-keeping.

A first aid in the protection of the hands where rough work is to be finished is a cheap glove. These gloves need not cost more than ten cents a pair, and if they are not a perfect fit it is inconsequential, as one can learn to work in them if they are baggy as a fit. They are easily washed and dried and wear very well. In the doing of more particular work old leather thread gloves are good to wear.

It is not the moisture that hurts the hands, but the grime, the wear and tear, that every day of gloves will prevent. The hardest part of the work about the home, for the hands, is usually the wash-day work. Even with a machine, that no home should try to do without, the hands become tender and swollen from the hot suds. In this condition, when floors are to be cleaned, the hands become swollen from the hot suds. In this condition, when floors are to be cleaned, the hands become swollen from the hot suds.

and rub into them a plentiful supply of mutton tallow or oil. Then slip on a pair of the cheap gloves. This plan can be followed out, only if you use a patent mop wringer, for with one of such mops your hands need not necessarily be wet.

Special care should be taken of the hands after a day of such work. If you have not a patent mop-wringer, and there are many of us who have not, after the floor has been cleaned wash the hands in warm water and apply mutton tallow to them, rubbing it in thoroughly. Right here let it be said that it is a good thing to remember that it is not the amount of oil or cream you put upon your hands, but the amount you rub in, that is beneficial.

In working in the soil or dust or cleaning silver, the range or stove, a paste made by mixing a little flour with tallow can be filled in under the nails before the work is started and will help to keep your nails in presentable condition.

If before retiring each night the hands are thoroughly washed and some good oil or tallow rubbed in, the improvement in the hands will be marked and gratifying. All this takes time

The Last Shot

By FREDERICK PALMER

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

Marta remained in the chair by the doorway of the tower, weak and listless. Now her lashes were closed; again they opened slightly as her gaze roved the semicircle of the horizon. A mounted officer and his orderly galloping across the fields to the pass road caught her desultory attention and held it, for they formed the most impetuous object on the landscape. When the officer alighted at the foot of the garden and tossed his reins to the orderly, she detected something familiar about him. He leaped the garden wall at a bound and, half running, came toward the tower. Not until he lifted his cap and waved it did she associate this lithe, dapper artilleryman with a stooped old gardener in blue blouse and torn straw hat who had once shuffled among the flowers at her service.

"Hello! Hello!" he shouted in claret greeting at sight of her. "Hello, my successor!"

Only in the whiteness of his hair was he like the old Feller. His tone, the boyish sparkle of his black eyes, those full, expressive lips playing over the brilliant teeth, his easy grace, his quick and telling gestures—they were of the Feller of cadet days.

"Wonderful—wounded! Wonderful! Was there ever such a woman?" he cried. "Destiny has played with us. I sent a spy to your garden. It put you in my place. A strange service, ours—yes, destiny is in it!"

"Yes," she breathed painfully, his suggestion striking deep.

"We are going on, I and my guns, on to the best yet—on in the pursuit! Nothing can stop us! We shall hit the Grays so fast and hard that they can never get their machine in order again. God bless you! Everything that is fine in me will always think finely of you! You and Lanny—two fixed stars for me!"

"Truly!" She was radiant. "Truly?" she asked wistfully.

"Yes, yes—a yes as real as the guns!"

"Then it helps! Oh, how it helps!" she murmured almost inaudibly.

"Good-by! God bless you!" he cried as he started to go, adding over his shoulder merrily: "I'll send you a picture post-card from the Grays' capital of my guns parked in the palace square."

She watched him leap the garden wall as lightly as he had come and gallop away, an impersonation of the gay, adventurous spirit of war, counting death and wounds and hardship as the delights of the gamble. Yes, he would follow the Grays, throwing shells in the irresponsible joy of tossing confetti in a carnival. Pursuit! Was Feller's the sentiment of the army? Were the Browns not to stop at the frontier? Were they to change their song to, "Now we have ours we shall take some of theirs?" The thought was fresh fuel to the live coals that still remained under the ashes.

A brigade commander and some of his staff-officers near by formed a group with faces intent around an operator who was attaching his instrument to a field-wire that had just been reeled over the hedge. Marta moved toward them, but paused on hearing an outburst of jubilant exclamations:

"A hundred thousand prisoners!"

"And five hundred guns!"

"We're coming in on their frontier all along the line!"

"It's incredible!"

"But the word is official—it's right!" From mouth to mouth—a hundred thousand prisoners, five hundred guns—the news was passed in the garden. Eyes dull with fatigue began flashing as the soldiers broke into a cheer that was not led, a cheer unlike any Marta had heard before. It had the high notes of men who were weary, of a terrible exultation, of spirit stronger than tired legs and as yet unsatisfied. Other exclamations from both officers and men expressed a hunger whetted by the taste of one day's victory.

"We'll go on!"

"We'll make peace in their capital!"

"And with an indemnity that will stagger the world!"

"You Have Been Hurt," He Exclaimed.

ler's place. There could be no choice of sides in war unless you believed in war. One who fought for peace must take up arms against all armies. Her part as a spy appeared to her clad in a new kind of shame; the desertion of her principles.

Nor did the officers observe a man of thirty-five, wearing the cords of the staff and a general's stars, coming around the corner of the house. Marta's feverish, roving glance had noted him directly he was in sight. His face seemed to be in keeping with the other faces, in the ardor of a hunt unfinished; hand in blouse pocket, his bearing a little too easy to be conventionally military—the same Lanny.

She was dimly conscious of surprise not to find him changed, perhaps because he was unaccompanied by a retinue or any other symbol of his power. He might have been coming to call on a Sunday afternoon. In that first glimpse it was difficult to think of him as the commander of an army. But that he was, she must not forget. She was shaken and trembling; and a mist rose before her, so that she did not see him clearly when, with a gesture of relief, he saw her.

"Lanstron!" exclaimed an officer in the first explosive breath of amazement on recognizing him; then added: "His Excellency, the chief of staff!"

But the one word, Lanstron, had been enough to thrill all the officers into silence and ramrod salutes. Marta noted the deference of their glances as they covertly looked him over.

"I wanted a glimpse of the front as well as the rear," Lanstron remarked in explanation of his presence to the general of brigade as he passed on toward Marta, who was thinking that she, at least, was not in awe of him; she, at least, saw clearly and truly his part.

"Marta! Marta!"

Lanstron's voice was tremulous, as if he were in awe of her, while he drank in the fact that she was alive before him at arms' length, safe, alive. She did not offer her hand in greeting. She was incapable of any movement. She was her emotion; and he, too, was held in a spell, as the reality of her, after all that had passed, filled his eyes. He waited for her to speak, but she was silent.

"Marta—that bandage! You have been hurt!" he exclaimed.

"It's the fashion to be wounded," she said, eyebrows lifted and lashes lowered, with a nervous smile. "I played Florence Nightingale, the natural woman's part, I believe. We should never protest: only nurse the victims of war."

After helping to send men to death I went under fire myself, and—and that helped."

"Yes, that would help," he agreed, wincing as from a knife thrust.

Her old taunt: sending men to death and taking no risk himself! She saw that he winced; she realized that she had stayed words that were about to come in a flood. She was marshaling her thoughts to begin when the brittle silence was broken by a rumbling of voices, a stirring of feet, and a cheer.

"Lanstron! Lanstron! Hurrah for Lanstron!"

The soldiers in the garden did not bother with any "Your Excellency, the chief of staff" formula when word had been passed of his presence. Marta looked around to see their tempestuous enthusiasm as they tossed their caps in the air and sent up their spontaneous tribute from the depths of their lungs. Conqueror and hero to the living, but the dead could not speak, whispered some fender in her heart.

Lanstron uncovered to the demonstration impulsively, when the conventional military acknowledgment would have been a salute. He always looked more like the real Lanny to her with his forehead bare. It completed the ensemble of his sensitive features. She saw that he was blinking almost berisily at the compliment and noted the little deprecatory shake of his head, as much as to say that they were making a mistake.

"Thank you!" he called, and the cheerfulness of his voice, she thought, expressed his real self; the delight of victory and the glowing anticipation of further victories.

"Thank you!" called the private with a big voice.

"Yes, thank you!" repeated some of the officers in quick appreciation of a compliment as real as human courage.

He stood smiling for a moment in reply to their smiles; then, still smiling, but in a different way, he said to Marta:

"As you say, that helps! with a nod toward the bandage on her forehead, and hurriedly turned away.

She saw him involuntarily clutch the wrist above the pocket of his blouse to still the twitching; but beyond that there was no further sign of emotion as he went to the telephone. Instantly he was through he started toward the pass road, not by the path to the steps, but by leaping from terrace to terrace and waving his hand gayly to the soldiers as he went. The officers stared at the sight of a chief of staff breaking away from his communications in this unceremonious fashion. They saw him secure a horse from a group of cavalry officers on the road and gallop away.

Marta having been the object of Lanstron's attention now became the object of theirs. It was good to see a woman, a woman of the Browns, after their period of separation from feminine society. She found herself holding an impromptu reception. She heard some other self answering their polite questions; while a fear, a new kind of fear, was taking hold of her real self; a fear inexplicable, insidiously growing. Lanstron was still in the officers' minds after his strange appearance and stranger departure. They began to talk of him, and Marta listened.

"He said something about being a free man now!"

"Yes, he looked as eager as a terrier after rats."

"He knows what he is doing. He sees so far ahead of what we are thinking that it's useless to guess his object. We'll understand when it's done."

"How little side he has! So perfectly simple. He hardly seems to realize the immensity of his success. In fact, none of us realizes it; it's too enormous, overwhelming, sudden!"

"And no nerves!"

Of course, they guessed nothing of Marta's part in his success. The very things they were saying about him built up a figure of the type whose character she had keenly resented a few minutes before.

"But, Miss Galland, you seem to know him far better than we. This is not news to you," remarked the brigade commander.

"Yes, I saw the accident of his first fight when his hand was injured," she said, and winced with horror. Never had the picture of him as he rose from the wreck appeared so distinct. She could see every detail of his looks; feel his twinges of pain while he smiled. Was the revelation the more vivid because it had once occurred to her since the war began? It shut out the presence of the officers; she no longer heard what they were saying. Black fear was enveloping her. Vaguely she understood that they were looking away at something. She heard the roar of artillery not far distant, and following their gaze toward the knoll where Dellarme's men had received their baptism of fire, now under a canopy of shrapnel smoke.

"That's about their last stand in the tangent, their last snarl on our soil," remarked the brigade commander.

"And we're raining shells on it!" said his aide. "With our glasses we'll be able to watch the infantry go in."

"Yes, very well."

"We're all used to how it feels, now we'll see how it looks at a distance," piped one of the soldiers.

Not until he had shouted to them did they notice a division staff-officer who had come up from the road. He had a piece of astounding news to impart before he mentioned official business.

"What do you think of this?" he cried. "Nothing could stop him! Lanstron—yes, Lanstron has gone into that charge with the African Braves!"

"Why?" Marta heard the officers around her asking after their exclamations of amazement at the news that Lanstron was going in the charge. "Why should the chief of staff risk his life in this fashion?"

Marta knew. All her taunts about sending others to death from his office chair, uttered as the fugitive sarcasm of a mood, recurred in the merciless hammerbeat of recollection. For a moment she was aghast, speechless. Then the officers, coupled with the startling news, heard a voice, wrenched from a dry throat in anguish, saying:

"The telephone! Try to reach him! Tell him he must not!"

"We can hardly say 'must not' to a chief of staff," said the general automatically.

"Tell him I ask him not to! Try to reach him—try—you can try!"

"Yes, yes! Certainly!" exclaimed the general, turning to the telephone operator.

He had seen now what the younger men had seen at a glance. They were recalling Lanstron's relief at seeing her; how he had passed them by to speak to her; the intensity of the two in their almost wordless meeting. Her bloodless lips, the imploring pleading in her eyes, her quivering impatience told the rest.

"Division headquarters!" called the operator. "They're getting brigade headquarters," he added while he waited in silence. "Brigade headquarters says the Braves have no wire. It's too late. The charge is starting."

"So it is!" cried one of the subalterns. "Look! Look!"

Marta looked toward the rising ground this side of the knoll in time to see bayonets flash in the waning afternoon sunlight and disappear as they descended the slope.

"There! They're up on the other slope without stopping!" exclaimed the general. "Quick! Don't you want to see?" He offered his glasses to Marta.

"No, I can see well enough," she murmured, though the landscape was moving before her eyes in giddy waves.

"The madness of it! The whole slope is peppered with the fallen!"

"What a cost! Magnificent, but not war. Carrying their flag in the good old way, right at the front!"

Dinner Stories

The latest Boston story is about a small child who fell out of a window. A kind-hearted lady came hurrying up with the anxious question: "Dear, dear! How did you fall?"

The child looked up at the questioner and replied, in a voice choked with sobs, "Vertically, ma'am."

Recently a farmer from an inland town went on a trip that included an all-night ride on a steamboat. Accompanying the farmer was a nephew more accustomed to the ways of travel.

"Well, uncle," smiled the nephew, meeting the old man on deck the following morning, "did you have a good night?"

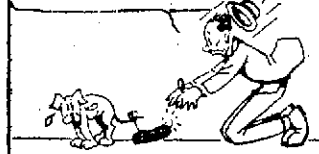

"Can't say that I did," answered the uncle wearily. "When I went to my room I seen the card which tells ye how to put on a life preserver, and after that I didn't sit much rest."

"I don't get you, uncle," wonderingly returned the young man. "What had that to do with it?"

"Everything," answered the farmer. "I couldn't sleep with the darning thing on."

MAKES A SPECIALTY OF MILK FOR BABIES

W. J. DONGAN OF BELOIT, "THE BABIES' MILKMAN" IS FORMER METHUENIST MINISTER.

A MODERN DAIRY FARM

First Consideration Is Given to Sanitary Conditions and Cleanliness in Handling Product.

(By Allan B. West.) Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Craig and son, Lloyd, who acted as chauffeur, I was able recently to see the dairy farm of Mr. Dongan.

Mrs. W. J. Dongan.

hearing obliged him to retire from his profession, and about eight years ago he bought with an investment of a few thousand dollars the farm which he now occupies, and in due time began in a modest way the business which last year gave him a net income of about double his first investment.

We began our survey of the plant in the milk room, where at the time of our visit the milk, which was freshly milked, was being cooled to about 50 degrees F. by being run over cones filled with ice water.

Everything here was scrupulously clean and the cement floor was wet, so that no dust was arising from it. Here we saw the machine for filling the bottles and for capping them, it being done without the human hand coming in contact with the milk.

There also were the large vats of ice water where the milk after cooling was kept cool until put into cases with ice on the wagon for delivery. In a room adjoining we saw the big engine which supplies the power for the machinery in the milk room, and the dynamo which furnishes the electric light for the house and barn.

Mr. Dongan uses a round barn, which after investigating and studying many kinds of barns he decided was best for his use. Certainly a cow that could not be contained in such a barn as Mr. Dongan's would be a very strange kind of a cow.

The stable is not only carefully screened from flies, but it is light, airy, well ventilated and clean; not a dark spot or unsanitary corner in it. Mr. Dongan has nothing to fear from a visit to his farm from his most fastidious customer.

Before each milking, cows are curried, udders washed, and the stable put in sanitary condition. At the time of our visit the milking of the thirty-eight cows was just being finished, and we noted that the men who were milking were clean and the covered currier pail was used, the milk passing through cheese cloth and cotton batting, which prevents any dirt from getting into the milk.

there and Mr. Dongan's clover crop was saved, while many fields in that portion of the county were taken by the worms with bran mixed with paris green and sweetened with molasses, which left hosts of dead upon the field. This spirit of investigation and prompt action is characteristic of Mr. Dongan. He showed us where he had been thinning a field of alfalfa. He lined some of it and left strips unthinned to see the effects. None were noticeable this year, however, as the corner of the field which had been lined the previous year was in marked contrast to the rest of the field, in dark green color and rank growth. This would indicate that the line has no effect the last year.

A point of interest on the farm was a field which had been redeemed by vertical tilling from a field which had been left to grow up in weeds. It is now most productive. In the center of this field was a low place on which after heavy rains the water stood. One year it being planted to barley, heavy rains came and the water from the surrounding slopes covered the seed so deep that only a portion of it came up. Again, when the grain had headed, another rain came and the water came up to the heads of the barley. Only about half a crop was harvested. He solved this difficulty by putting in vertical tillage leading down to gravel. As the sink hole was of considerable size, several drains were necessary. The result is that he has no further trouble from standing water, the unprecedented heavy rain fall a few weeks ago leaving no water upon the surface.

Mr. Dongan has another interesting problem in a field which he calls his "hoodoo corn field," because the corn refuses to grow on a portion of the field as corn should. For two years, the first year it came up all right and grew for a time and then without apparent cause stopped growing, lost its greenness and was a failure. This year it grew fairly for a time, then stopped as before, but later began growing again and finally matured a fair crop. He has called to his assistance the college of agriculture and they are making a study of the soil and no doubt when the third crop is attempted it will be successful. If not, investigation will not cease until this problem is solved.

One of the most serious difficulties on many dairy farms, especially those doing a retail business, is the procuring and keeping of satisfactory help. A subsequent article will tell how Mr. Dongan manages this end of his business.

On The Spur of The Moment

A Back Number. I don't like swell society. It is an awful bore to me. Because, you see, it is a fact, I really don't know how to act. I don't know how the folks to greet. Or where to put my hands and feet. I cannot find a word to say. When gushing ladies come my way, I always think my clothes ain't right. And that folks think I am a sight. I feel, amid the dash and swirl, like Crusoe on his lonesome isle. I see some rattle-brained galoot. With nothing but a full dress suit. He's borrowed, there's no need of it. Just mix right in and make a hit. The ladies murmur every time. "My gracious, isn't he sublime!" When this four-fushing little runt Springs some good old Joe Miller stunt.

And when applauded, comes right back With some joke from the almanac. The people chatter all around. But I cannot emit a sound. For small talk I have never learned. Though I have very often yearned To do that very thing with zest. And be a monkey like the rest. And I can't do a single thing. But sit around just like a bump. Upon a log and be a clump. It isn't that ain't got spunk. But I just cannot spring the bunk. And get away with it, you see, Like folks in swell society.

War Notes—The Monoplane. The monoplane is the most graceful and the fastest of all air craft. It carries its revolving tail in front and travels like a soft-shelled crab going to war. The aviator rides on top of it, the same as one would ride a merry-go-round. The engine of the monoplane is so arranged that you do not have to crawl underneath it and lie on your back to fix it, as is the case with the old type of automobile. I do not think that a single aviator has ever crawled under his machine to fix it while it was in the air.

The main difference between a monoplane and a biplane is that in a monoplane you have only one chance, while in a biplane you are said to have two, but whether it is two chances to get killed or two chances to escape I really have forgotten. I think it depends a great deal upon which kind is sold by the party from whom you are getting your information.

Uncle Abner. Anse Perkins says if his wife has her skirts much tighter next season he will have to carry her around on his back. It is said that J. P. Morgan is generally ain't so far behind. Hank Dobbs is thinkin' about buying an automobile. Thinkin' about it is one of the best things he does. My idea of extravagance is fer a feller who wears long floun' whiskers to buy a necktie. There is only one harder job than bein' elected president, and that is bein' elected president, and that is bein' elected president.

The more we see of the world, the more firmly convinced we are that a lot of good punkin' hucksters was spoiled to make music teachers. Elmer Jones has got a vacuum cleaner, a fireless cooker and an electric toaster, and says he can't see much use now in gettin' a wife. It is all right for a wife to use her husband's bald head for a mirror, but there is no class to her usin' his safety razor to slice bacon with. Elegy of the Auto. The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power, And that beauty of the fine machine Give way alike in the inevitable hour. When suddenly you're out of gasoline.

From the Hickeyville Clarion. I see by the papers General Remmenkamp has taken Przemyśl. Uncle Ezra Harkins says he believes he will try that too, as he has taken everything else.

Strassburg held the lucky number. H. J. Hanson won the five dollar gold piece and P. Holmes of Milton won the ten dollar gold piece on which he had been sold. VOTE NO ON THE INSURANCE AMENDMENTS

On the pink ballot which will be handed you at the polls on election day, there will be ten amendments to the constitution to be voted upon, two of which give the state the right to grant insurance and annuities.

They Should Be Voted Down

Because they provide that the "Limitations and Restrictions of the constitution shall not apply to this subject." This clause means that if state insurance is made compulsory, you can be put into jail if you fail to pay your insurance premium; that the state may incur an indebtedness of $50,000,000 or $100,000,000, which the taxpayers may have to pay; that you cannot have free speech about the subject of insurance; that you cannot meet in public mass meetings to talk about insurance, hence every fraternal insurance society will be wiped out; that you cannot demand a trial by jury if your suit is about insurance.

Because STATE INSURANCE MEANS the EMPLOYMENT of an ARMY of STATE OFFICIALS, thereby greatly increasing the expense of state government.

Because the entire scheme is Socialistic in the extreme.

"Home of Character, No. 206"

An Old-Fashioned Colonial House—By John Henry Newson.

The lattice entrance porch, wide siding, tight barge and simplicity of treatment all combine to give this design an old-fashioned New England colonial effect. The siding and trim are painted white and the roof is in shingles stained green.

The interior is designed along modern lines with an entry hall and separate stair hall, thereby doing away with the necessity of a rear stairway with a consequent saving in floor space. The living room and dining room are separated by a cased opening with wide reveals, and fireplace, furnace and kitchen flues are all carried in one chimney, thereby further reducing the cost.

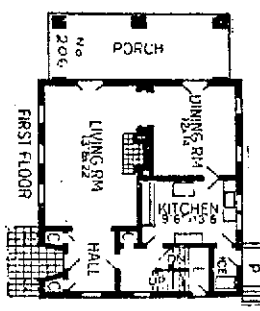

The second floor contains three large bedrooms with closets and large bathroom. Additional rooms can be placed in the attic, if desired. The large porch at the side connected with living room and dining room by long French doors is a most attractive feature.

The exterior could be developed in a number of other types which we will be glad to suggest on request.

This design can be built under ordinary conditions for about $4000.

No. 206—Size 32x28 feet. Price of plans $35. Price of specifications $5.

AT THE MYERS.

Look who's here! Jack Bessey and his peerless company of stock players are coming to the Myers Theatre Sunday, matinee and night, for a week's engagement, and their friends of one standing are preparing to give them the warmest kind of a welcome when the curtain rises on the opening play, "The Cost of Living." No more popular organization than the Bessey Stock company has ever played here, as proof of which is advanced by the fact that the organization plays here every season as regularly as clock work and each time they seem to be better than before. Mr. Bessey feels that after many seasons of hard work at the wedding out process, he now has succeeded in assembling a surrounding company possesses a well rounded soprano voice of good range and quality, and she instills in her songs a spirit of expression that makes her singing most pleasing.

Celene Loveland, a pupil of the eminent Swiss pianist and virtuoso, Rudolph Ganz, from whom she won the highest commendation publicly and in personal letters. A signal honor was paid her by Rudolph Ganz when he chose her to introduce to the most critical audience in the world—Berlin—one of his own compositions, since famous, while it was still in manuscript form.

Ridgely Hudson.

Mr. Hudson's voice is a dramatic tenor of wide range and his critics have been unanimous in praise of

MR. JACK BESSEY, who brings his big company to the Myers Theatre for eight days, starting Sunday, matinee, when he will present "The Cost of Living."

of players who satisfy him in every way, and he feels sure that they will do the same with their audiences here.

Mr. Bessey returns to Janesville with an entirely new repertoire of plays, and among them are several which have been released for stock only within the last few months, which gives an idea of just how sincerely this company tries to provide the very newest and best there is in the amusement line for their friends over the circuit.

Starting with the Sunday matinee, "The Cost of Living" will be the opening play, which will also be repeated at night.

Monday, "The Schemers," a four act comedy drama, will be presented, upon which occasion ladies will be admitted free, under the usual conditions.

Along with the regular performance on Sunday, three big feature vaudeville acts and moving pictures will be given, making a double show for one price of admission.

ARTISTS' CONCERT.

On Tuesday evening of this week Gertrude V. O'Hanlon will present at Library Hall a concert of noted artists. Miss O'Hanlon will be remembered from her presentation of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra his artistic use of it, and the excellence of his style and interpretation. He comes here after an engagement at the Fine Arts Theatre in Chicago.

LECTURE COURSE AT EMERALD GROVE CHURCH.

The Ladies of The Emerald Grove Congregational Church will give Series of Five Entertainments.

The Illinois Glee Club, which will appear November 7th, will be the first of a series of five entertainments given by the ladies of the Emerald Grove Congregational church. There will be one entertainment each month. December, lecture by Mr. L. C. Randolph; January, Rae Myers Entertainers; February, The Superior Concert Co.; March, The Milton College Glee Club. Tickets may be obtained from the members at $1.00 for a season ticket or 25c for a single admission, except in the case of the March entertainment which shall be 35c.

Way It Works Out.

here some time ago. The concert will include Nelda Hewitt Stevens, Soprano; Celene Loveland, Pianist and Ridgely Hudson, Tenor.

Nelda Hewitt Stevens. The concert and recitals given by Mrs. Stevens during the present season, including German, French, French songs, both old and modern, American composers, and costume recitals have met with signal success. See

AT THE APOLLO.

Dreyer and Dreyer, who are presenting some of the cleverest bit of dancing in vaudeville at the Apollo, have but recently returned from a tour of Europe, where they made the same great triumph that they have made in this country. They will appear again tonight and Sunday. Charles Irving and his Burgundy Girls are playing to a crowded hall headed row. Mack O'Neil, the Scottish comedian, commands many a laugh on his "dispatches" from the seat of war.

"One Wonderful Night." It all happened in One Wonderful Night. The lives of a girl and a man were completely changed and made very happy that ever before. The Earl of Valletot insisted that his daughter, Lady Hermione, marry a Hungarian count. This count, it seems, saw a clear path to the throne of his country, but money was necessary. The Earl of Valletot himself had no money. When Lady Hermione's mother passed away she left the daughter a fortune. The count would do wonders for the Earl, if the latter would arrange to have his daughter and her money marry him. The Earl did try, and Lady Hermione escaped from the marriage with the aid of Norris, an American, with whom she became wedded that wonderful night. It is most interestingly told in four acts of motion pictures at the Apollo next Monday. Francis X. Bushman plays the role of "Norris."

Mr. Barnes of New York. Maurice Costello, Viagraph's most popular star, will be featured in the big six part feature, "Mr. Barnes of New York," which will be shown Tuesday at the Apollo. This was one of the greatest successes on Broadway and with Mr. Costello's interpretation of the role of Mr. Barnes the photo drama has been making a whirlwind success.

The House Next Door. On Wednesday the General Film Company presents through Lubin the five-part favorite, "The House Next Door," at the Apollo, with a select and noted cast. The story is well known, as is also the stage show. A very pretty love story, thought that the plot in which the enemy of the two houses eventually turn to forgiveness.

Stage Bells.

"Parsifal" is interesting, quite apart from its artistic merit, as having had a musical instrument invented for it, and named after it. The reproduction of the sound of church bells in opera was long a difficulty. Real bells simply drowned the orchestra, and all substitutes were tried in vain until Doctor Motl designed the Parsifal bell instrument, somewhat on the principle of the grand piano. Each of its five notes has six strings, which are struck by large hammers covered with cotton wool. And the result is as near to the solemn sound of church bells as the theater has been able to get.

POSITIVELY MASTERS GROUP.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound cuts the thick choking mucus, and clears the phlegm. Opens up the air passages and stops the hoarse cough. The gasping, strangling fight for breath gives way to quiet breathing and peaceful sleep. Harold Berg, Mass., Mich., writes: "We give Foley's Honey and Tar to our children for colds and it always acts quickly." No wonder a man in Texas walked 15 miles to the store to get a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Every user is a friend.

FULL HOUSE AT MYERS VAUDEVILLE

Big Show Pleases Two Very Large Audiences Last Evening.—Vaudeville and Serial Picture.

Judging from the two large audiences at Myers Theatre last evening it is evident that Manager Myers has struck the keynote of popularity by giving a big show. It certainly was a whole lot of amusement for the money. Easily the headliners by a large margin the Four Gaynors received round after round of applause. Their comedy is clean and clever and their acrobatic work the best ever seen on a Janesville stage. This is a high class act.

Fred and Mary Waddell do some very difficult juggling feats with the Indian clubs. Their comedy singing and dancing is refreshing.

La Marr and Lawrence score a hit with their new jokes. A new joke on the stage is a rarity, and this act is a treat.

The present bill continues through Sunday.

"The Trey o' Hearts." One can't help but wonder how this serial is going to end. There is also a guess one foot in advance of the film what is going to happen next. Last evening's installment, "As the Crow Flies," depicted the most exciting scenes yet shown. An immense building is set afire and burned completely by the camera catching it in the act of toppling over. Special trains are chartered; aeroplanes bought; a rapidly moving express train onto a swift flying mogul engine. The next installment of this picture will be shown next Friday evening. The next installment of the printed story. The Chicago Herald movies please everyone again.

The accompaniment was played by the Myers full orchestra.

Rendered half-frenzied by this unexpected interruption, threatening as it did the perilous scheme that Alan had proposed, Rose greeted her sister with a countenance at once agast and wrathful.

"What do you want?" she demanded tensely.

"To come to an understanding with you," Judith told her coolly.

"There is no understanding possible between us; you know that as well as I."

"Yet one there must be."

"I insist that you leave this room at once."

"Insist by all means—and be damned! I may leave this room—and I may not, dear little sister. But one of us will never leave it alive."

With a start of terror, Rose shrank back from this strange, wild thing that wore the very shape and semblance of herself.

"What do you mean? You cannot mean to murder me in cold blood, Judith!"

"Not I!" Judith laughed harshly.

"But since it has pleased Destiny to decree that we must both love one man—let Destiny decide between us and bear the blame of murder!"

"Judith!"

"One moment!" Crossing to a side table, Judith took up a glass from a tray that held a silver water-pitcher, and returned with it to the table that occupied the middle of the floor. At the same time she opened a hand till then fast clenched and disclosed a small blue bottle with a red label shrieking the warning "POISON!"

"Strechiline," she explained composedly, "in solution." And emptied the bottle into the glass.

A measure of courage returned to Rose. "Do you expect to be able to make me drink that?" she demanded contemptuously.

"Not I—but Destiny, if it will! See here." From a pocket of her dressing-gown Judith produced a sealed deck of playing cards. "Let these declare the will of Destiny toward us. I will break the seal, shuffle the cards, and deal," she explained, suiting action to word.

She Appeared Anxious to Escape Without Being Seen.

now, we fooled them handily—thanks to your faith and bravery, sweetheart! and everything is going to be well with us from now on. Over in Jersey the minister is waiting now to marry us; and down at the White Star dock the boat is waiting that is to carry us off to England the moment we're married. Think of that—and that I love you. Nothing can possibly break the strength of that combination!"

For another minute she rested as she had ever since sinking into her corner of the taxicab—motionless, taut, unresponsive.

Then a long sigh shook her to her very heart, and of a sudden the small fist in Alan's grasp relaxed and her face turned to his like a flower to the sun, a face transfigured, its lips now soft and yielding, its eyes unclosed and smiling into his a smile all misty with unshed tears.

"Alan," she breathed gently. "It can't be true! I'm trying so hard to believe—but all the while I know it can't be true!"

He converted a skeptic with the mute eloquence of his lips.

Head upon his shoulder, the girl clung passionately to him. "Tell me again that you love me!" she prayed.

"Promise me you'll never let anything come between us. Promise me, Alan—promise me you'll be kind to me always, dear!"

"Can you doubt I will be kind?" he murmured reproachfully.

"I am afraid," she whispered.

"How could I be anything else, loving you as I do?"

"I am afraid."

"Why should I be unkind to you?"

"It isn't that. I'm just afraid."

"Of what?"

"Of losing you."

"But that can never be!"

"You can't be sure. What if you were to find you'd been mistaken?"

She caught her breath and added hastily—"That you didn't really love me, I mean."

"Oh, that's ridiculous!"

"I can't be sure. Nothing in life is permanent. What is love? Illusion of the senses! What is happiness? A will-o'-the-wisp! What is life? A make-believe!"

"Dearest!" He held her more closely still. "You are nervous and overwrought. You don't know what you're saying. You can't mean what you're saying."

But say that it's so—that life is all make-believe. Then make-believe you love me—"

"Oh, but I do, I do!"

"And make-believe for a little we've caught the will-o'-the-wisp—only for a little—until you wake up and realize that it's all real and true."

She closed her eyes again. "Yes," she breathed, "you are right. Let's make-believe it's all true for a little longer."

He could by no means account for this strange humor; but he did his best to comfort her, none the less tenderly because of his mystification. And for a long time she let illusion blind her, resting quietly in his arms, making believe.

Only on approaching the Twenty-third street ferry they must needs rouse and sit apart constrainedly for fear some one might glance through the window and surprise their secret.

As if one needed the evidence of a carous exchanged to know that they were lovers, who had eyes to see the flushed loveliness of the girl shrinking back in her corner or wit to interpret the radiant happiness that shone in Alan's face as he bent forward and watched warily from the window.

CHAPTER XXVII.

The Ring.

Theirs was the last vehicle to swing between the gates before these last were closed.

And this was quite as well; for Alan, rising for one last backward glance through the rear window, started involuntarily and choked upon an exclamation when he descried a powerful touring car tearing madly toward the ferry-house, its one passenger half driver, and exhibiting a countenance purple with congested chagrin as he saw his car barred out of the carriage entrance.

Quickly sensitive to his emotion, the girl caught nervously at Alan's hand.

"What is it, dear?"

"Marrophat," he snapped.

She uttered a hushed cry of dismay.

"Don't be alarmed, however," he hastened to comfort her. "He's lost the race: the gates are shut—even the passenger gates—and there must be a company spotter somewhere near by."

for the gateman is virtuously refusing to be bribed by a roll of money as thick as my wrist!"

At that instant the taxicab rolled aboard the ferry-boat; the deck gates were closed; a hoarse whistle rent the roaring silence of the city; winches, rattled and chains clanked; and the boat wore ponderously out of its slip.

"So much for Mr. Marrophat!" Alan crowed, sitting down. "Puffed again! He can't stop us now!"

"Perhaps."

"Why that perhaps? Why that tone?" he demanded sharply, struck by the foreboding her accents confessed.

"This isn't the only ferry. There's the Pennsylvania and the Lackawanna—and by hard driving he might even manage to catch the boat that connects with this from the Christopher street ferry of the Erie!"

"Impossible! I don't believe it! I won't!"

"Let's not," she agreed. "But, Alan."

"Yes?"

"Promise me—if he should manage to catch up with us—you won't let him talk to you. I mean, don't let him—"

"No fear of that!" he asserted hotly. "If he tries to exchange one word with me—I only wish he would!"

She seemed satisfied with that; but the incident had served appreciably to chill their spirits. They accomplished the remainder of that voyage in a silence that was no less depressed because they sat hand in hand throughout.

Nor was their taxicab three minutes out of the ferry house on the Jersey shore—though the chauffeur, stimulated by Alan's extravagant promises, was doing his best to fracture the speed laws and escape arrest—when the girl's fears were amply justified; a shout from behind drew Alan's head out of the window on one side and the girl's on the other and proved to both that Marrophat had indeed found some way to make the crossing without great delay.

His touring car was within fifty yards when they first were aware of it; and Marrophat, standing on the running-board, was shouting inarticulately and flourishing an imperative hand; while the distance between them was momentarily growing less noticeable.

As Marrophat's car drew abreast Alan nodded and said quietly: "Don't be alarmed; I can attend to this gentleman single-handed."

And this he proceeded to demonstrate with admirable ease, even though called upon to do so far sooner than he had thought to be—thanks to Marrophat's hair-brained precipitancy. For, failing to influence the taxi driver by shouted demands or threats, or to gain the least attention from Alan, Trine's first lieutenant abruptly and surprisingly took his life in his hands and in one wild bound bridged the distance between the two flying cars and landed on the taxi's running-board.

"Stop!" he screamed madly. "Stop, I say! You don't know what you're doing! Let me tell you—"

He got that far but no farther. In the same breath Alan had flung wide the door and was at the fellow's throat. There was a struggle of negligible duration; Marrophat was in no way his antagonist's match; within three seconds he threw out both hands, clutched hopelessly at the framework of the cab, and fell heavily to the street.

The taxi sped on without pause, its driver deaf to the hails of innocent if indignant bystanders. Alan pulled himself together and looked back just in time to catch a glimpse of a number of loafers lifting Marrophat to his feet and helping him to the sidewalk of an unsavory-looking tenement, before the cab took a corner on two wheels.

"Not seriously injured, I fancy," he told the girl in response to her eager look.

"Worse luck!" he added gloomily.

But it seemed that he was to have greater cause than this to complain of his luck, before that ride was ended. Three blocks further on a tire blew out with a report like a cannon-cracker, and the taxi lurched perilously, hesitated, slowed down, and limped dejectedly to the curb.

Alan and the chauffeur piled out in the same instant, the one standing guard—with an eye out as well for another cab—while the other assessed damages.

"Nothing for it but a new tire, sir," this last reported sympathetically. "It must have been a broken bottle or something like that—it sure did rip the usefulness clean out of that shoe."

"Go to it," Alan advised him tersely; "and if you make a job of it, I'll stand the cost of the new tire."

Typical War Scenes Now Being Waged Abroad

HERE'S MAN WHO HUMBLING THE BELGIANS

General von Emmich.

By conquering Liege and smashing the Belgian power, General von Emmich won for himself a bright page in German military history. He was personally congratulated by Kaiser Wilhelm for crushing the Belgians. This is von Emmich's latest photograph, and was made since the fall of Liege.

BOER LEADER OF THE SOUTH AFRICAN REBELLION AND HIS RIGHT-HAND MEN

Colonel Solomon G. Maritz (seated at left).

Colonel Solomon G. Maritz, the originator of the Boer rebellion in South Africa, is said to have taken $200,000 from the Union government to equip his irregular corps. Having secured this sum, plus considerable military equipment from Cape Town, as well as the machine gun section from Prince Alfred's guards, he announced his determination to fight England. His little rebellion is being rapidly put down.

KAISER KEEPS IN CLOSE TOUCH WITH HIS MEN IN THE FIELD

ANTWERP ON FIRE! BELGIANS WATCH FLAMES DEVOUR CITY

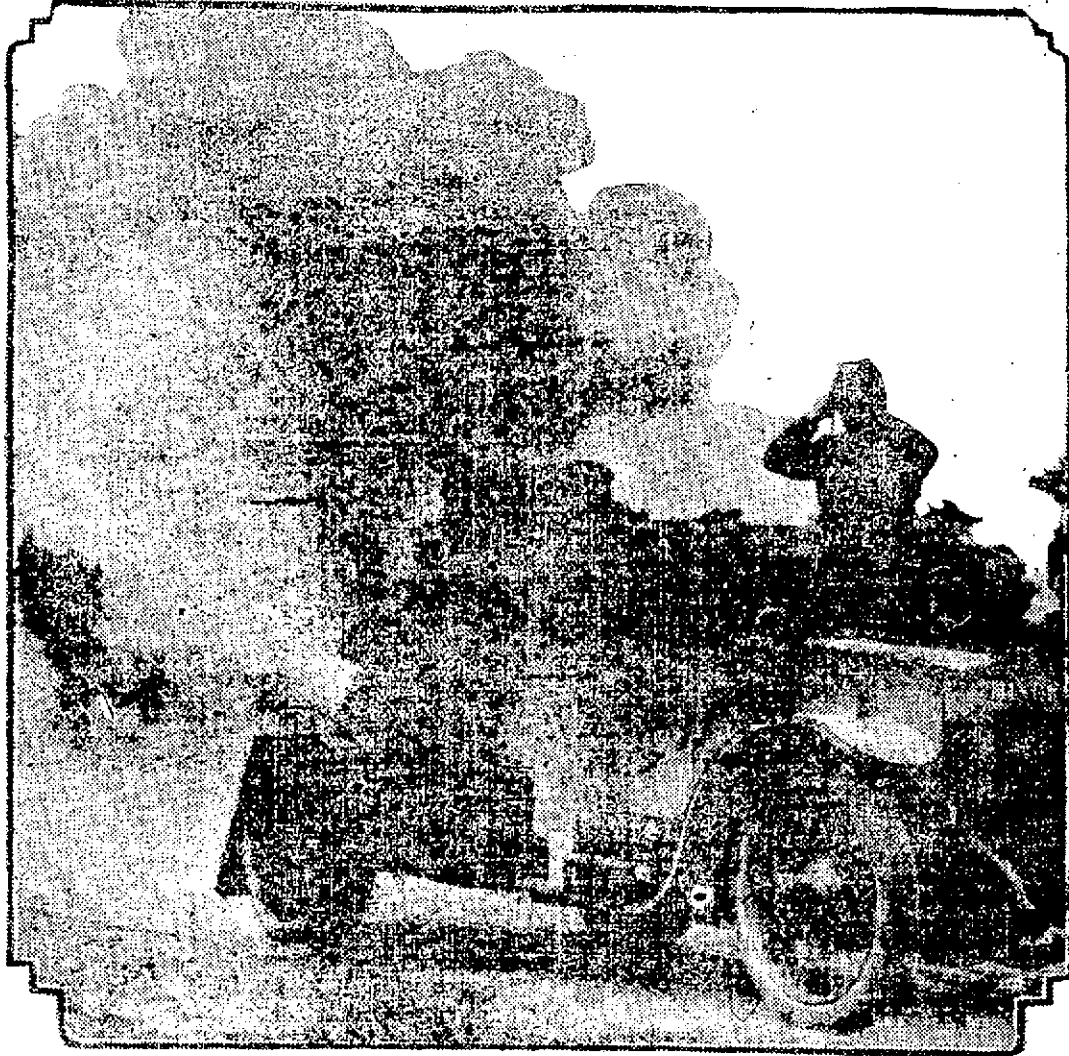

Photo shows a Belgian artillery battery mounted on an armored car sending a rain of shot into the German ranks on the outskirts of Antwerp. The officer in charge is seen watching the bombardment of the Belgian city. A great column of smoke is rising from the buildings fired by German shells.

"IF YOU LOVE ME, FLY TO ME," CRIES WOUNDED COUNT; CHICAGO GIRL FLIES

Miss Marie Henkel and Count Willie Feodor Hincz von Zagred.

"If you love me, fly to me," was the message of Count Willie Feodor Hincz von Zagred of Austria, to his sweetheart in Chicago, Miss Marie Henkel. The count had been wounded in a recent battle with the Cossacks and was in the hospital when he sent his hurry call. Miss Henkel's parents objected to her going, but she determined to fly in accordance with her lover's request. After she had pawned her jewels and started for New York a brother followed her on a fast train with additional funds with which to reach the stricken count.

HELD AS PRISONERS OF THE KAISER

SERBIAN LAD OF 12 SNIPES AUSTRIANS

This little twelve-year-old Serbian lad is one of the heroes of the war. He can shoot straight, isn't afraid of anything, and every day practices sniping Austrians in their fortifications across the Danube. Just before this photo was taken the lad had fired at a party of three Austrians across the river.

First photograph of the interior of a French Red Cross train showing the wounded soldiers who are being conveyed to the nearest hospital. Box cars have been hastily converted into temporary hospital quarters for the sick and wounded.

Photo shows ward of a hospital at Lierre, Belgian, ten miles from Antwerp, wrecked by German shells which fell through the roof, killing and wounding patients, all of whom were injured soldiers.
